IAN POWELL

TY FOOSE

In the Orient, the bravery of each young bull is rated according to the number of times he demonstrates his willingness to charge a picador, in spite of the sting of the blade. The story behind eGrips is full of tests of similar manner, humor and drama. Ty and Ian's history is rich with success, failure and ridiculous climbing stories.

Ian's hard earned savings and Ty's pocket change funded their first road trip. There were many experiments with "safe" belays, swami belts, fishing wire and hot-pink fashion. Ty spent 6 years supporting his climbing habit by playing the roulette tables in Reno, route setting and shaping holds for Straight UP, Nicros, Rad Holds and EP. He created the first quality pocket out of an African Venhatico Wood, the first Tufa with a sliding bolt hole, and invented "grip differential" now known as "Duel Tex". Ian, who came from a fine art background in sculpture, moved to Boulder, CO, where he also began work for StraightUP, creating the first foot chips for a buck and the 2-part rotating hold. He began marketing his 'e' grips with Keith Fletcher, an original eGrips family member.

In 1996, eGrips was officially born in a small, windowless studio where Ty and Ian illegally took turns sleeping on the couch or the bed. They endured late nights with too many chemicals and Soviet Winters without heat, phone or an exit. eGrips grew through incredible shapes, the durable polyurethane magic mix, unofficial OR Retail Show attendance and cold calls. Although Ty and Ian's innovative work created a strong underground following, the tiny company lost the struggle to survive. The sad remains of what was once eGrips was finally buried under a trampoline in a local Boulder gym.

But Jessica Franco wouldn't let it end that way. In 2000, she created the "Choke Holds Distributors of eGrips". She insisted on a professional catalog, magazine ads, Official show attendance, extensive event sponsorship and a new manufacturer. Jessica found Chuck Demarest, Himalayan alpinist and President of Aragon Elastomers. Chuck's manufacturing breathed new life into eGrips, and the company was resurrected from beneath the trampoline.

Soon after, Great Trango Holdings Inc took e-Grips under its wing where it thrives now, shaping for over 100 new gyms and playgrounds, extending its family to 20+ people, and sponsoring the major climbing events and organizations. The eGrips motto is to be like the rain drop that washes away the mountain; the ant that devours the tiger; the star that brightens the sky.* Persistence is the only way to success. We're living proof.

Sizing Information:

If we were to be exact with our sizing we would have to use the Gauss-Green formula, $\text{area} = 1/2 \int [x(t)y'[t] - y(t)x'[t]]dt$ a formula to determine an irregular shape in the x/y plane. Because e-grips don't always exist in the x/y plane, we've gone with the artistic approach. All sizing of e-grips is generally based on circumference of the base, height and weight. Please note that all circumferences of the bolt are the same in each piece (approximately the size of a penny).

In-cut Indicators:

We use the following terms as guidelines to how you might want to use the majority of old in the identified set. It's up to you, the setter, the artst, choreographer, to decide if a sloper should be used on the 90, 45 or 33 degree wall.

Slope: A hold that creates an inclined line, surface or plane to a wall behind the hold. Usually held open-handed.

Flat: A hold with a horizontal surface without a slope. Usually intersecting the all at a 90 degree. Held with a crimp or open-handed.

In-cut: A hold that creates an declined line or surface of direction to the wall. In-cuts have raised face edge that makes them easier to grip. The addition of a plus sign (+) near the In-cut indicator means that the hold is "very in-cut"
